WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A wet weather pattern will continue for the next week as multiple storm systems move through Northwest California. A brief period of dry conditions is expected today with rain returning tonight into Monday as the next system impacts the region.

Medford Weather:

Today through Wednesday upper level ridging has started to build in over the forecast area, clearing out the mid to high level clouds and allowing extensive areas of fog and stratus to develop in the valleys of both the West and East side. This will limit cooling this morning, and low temperatures will likely not reach as low as previously thought. However, once the sun rises, the fog and low clouds should burn off, and daytime highs are expected to warm to similar values as yesterday.

Reno Weather:

High pressure will build along the West Coast today and last into Tuesday. Valley inversions will strengthen with overall dry conditions except for a few possible light showers near the Oregon border Monday. The next area of low pressure will approach Wednesday which will provide the next decent chance of precipitation.

San Francisco Weather:

A weak weather system will spread areas of light rain across the region from this afternoon through Monday. A stronger weather system is forecast to bring moderate rainfall and gusty winds to the region late Tuesday night and Wednesday. The weather pattern will remain active late in the week and into next weekend although strong storms are not expected.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

A brief break Sunday with patchy fog, then another weak system for Monday and a potentially stronger system for the middle of next week.

Hanford Weather:

A weak system will track to the North of the region on Monday. A ridge will prevail over the area on Tuesday allowing for some fog development during the late night through mid-morning hours. A stronger system will move through our area on Wednesday and Wednesday night providing for another round of rain and mountain snow.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Light scattered showers are expected to end from North to South overnight. A weak warm front approaching from the West late Sunday into Monday will bring the slight chance of light showers to the North of Santa Barbara. A low pressure system passing to the North will push a cold front through the region late Wednesday into Thursday supporting the chance of rain and mountain snow.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Scattered light showers will decrease from the Northwest today but could linger over San Diego County and near the mountains into tonight. Dry for Monday through early Wednesday with weak offshore flow. For Wednesday night and early Thursday a weakening front will bring some light precipitation along and West of the mountains. Another round of mainly light precipitation is possible around next Sunday. High temperatures will mostly be a little below average for the next week.

Southeast California Weather:

A weak trough will move through the area today bringing increased cloud cover along with a very slight chance of showers to the area. Otherwise dry weather with a gradual warming trend is expected this week as weak high pressure becomes the dominant weather feature.
